PHIL 220H.001 | 17th and 18th Century Western Philosophy

MW, 3:35 pm - 4:50 pm. Instructor(s): Alan Nelson. Enrollment = 24.

Western philosophy from roughly 1600-1800 is dominated by attempts to integrate traditional systems of politics and of theology with the rapidly developing, revolutionary, scientific understanding of the natural world. In this course we'll focus first on René Descartes, the philosopher, scientist, and mathematician who did the most to set the philosophical agenda for this period (and for a good deal of 21st century philosophy). This will provide a basis for considering developments in Thomas Hobbes and Margaret Cavendish. We will also more briefly consider the philosophies of Spinoza, Locke, Berkeley, Leibniz, and Hume. Topics include Mind, Matter, Space and Time, the foundations of morality, God, and the extent of human knowledge of these things.

PHIL 224H.001 | Existential Philosophy

TR, 9:30 am - 10:45 am. Instructor(s): Markus Kohl. Enrollment = 24.

A survey of European philosophers in the existentialist tradition. Topic to be discussed include: the question of whether our life has or lacks meaning; the relation between faith and reason; the significance of our finitude; the importance of human freedom; nihilism and absurdity; the connection between a meaningful life and a moral life; the possibility of combining existentialist and feminist commitments. Philosophers to be studied include chiefly Kierkegaard, Nietzsche, Dostoevski, Sartre, De Beauvoir, Camus.

Markus Kohl grew up in Germany before moving to England and then to the US. He studied philosophy and literature in Oxford, and obtained his PhD in

FY LAUNCH SECTION

This Lecture will be combined with other PHYS 118 sections, and it will be taught as a large survey class. PHYS 118-401, the Lab associated with this class, is the FY-Launch section; Stefan Jeglinski is the instructor of record for the lab. Please be sure to enroll in this class, PHYS 118-01F, and the corresponding lab, PHYS 118-401 to fulfill the FY-LAUNCH requirement.

ELIGIBLE STUDENTS

Seats are limited to incoming fall 2022 transfer students with fewer than 24 transfer credits and incoming fall 2022 first-year students.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES

Some incoming first-year students may be pre-registered into this class section per their pre-registration survey responses. Incoming transfer students with

PLCY 061H.001 | Policy Entrepreneurship and Public/Private/Non-Profit Partnerships

TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Daniel Gitterman. Enrollment = 24.

This seminar will define a policy entrepreneur and examine strategies used by policy entrepreneurs to achieve policy change or innovation in the policy making process. This course also aims to explore ways that public, private, and non-profit sectors collaborate to address problems that cannot be solved by one sector alone. There is growing recognition that sustainable solutions to some of the most complex challenges confronting our communities can benefit from these collaborative or {intersector} approaches.

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS ONLY.

Daniel Gitterman is Duncan MacRae '09 and Rebecca Kyle MacRae Professor and Chair of Public Policy at UNC-Chapel Hill. He also serves as Director of the

PLCY 110H.001 | Global Policy Issues

MWF , 10:10 am - 11:00 am. Instructor(s): Brigitte Seim. Enrollment = 24.

Global issues have sources, impacts, and solutions that extend beyond the borders of any one country. This course serves as an introduction to several of the most pressing issues facing populations around the world and the challenges of designing and implementing policies to address these issues. Emphasis will be placed on students' ability to critically evaluate the causes, consequences, and most promising policy responses to each challenge. Students will learn about global policy issues through the analysis of the scholarly literature and through a semester-long research project. They will be encouraged to build the analytical and communication skills necessary to pursue research in the most salient policy arenas facing our world today, either in further study or in career paths.

PLCY 210H.001 | Policy Innovation and Analysis

TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Jeff Summerlin-Long. Enrollment = 24.

This course will introduce students to public policy as a discipline and the policy analysis process. We will review the core steps, theories, and tools of the policy process, provide practice applying these tools, and encourage the evaluation of effectiveness of different policy alternatives. The process involves defining a public problem and understanding stakeholders and their perspectives; describing public problems with quantitative data; understanding market failures and other rationales for government involvement; selecting criteria relevant for decision-making; constructing policy alternatives; evaluating the different alternatives against the stated policy criteria; and making and communicating a recommendation. This is a research-based and communication-intensive course, which requires the completion of a policy brief in several, iterative steps. The course incorporates current events and relevant case studies to motivate and explain the policy analysis process.

POLI 233H.001 | Comparative Politics of the Middle East

MW, 3:35 pm - 4:40 pm. Instructor(s): Ashley Anderson. Enrollment = 24.

This course is designed as an introduction to contemporary Middle Eastern politics for advanced undergraduates. The goal is to provide students with the historical background and theoretical tools to address key questions about the region: 1) How has Western colonialism shaped contemporary state development? 2) How do patterns of authoritarian rule differ in the region and why do they persist? 3) Why do some Middle Eastern countries suffer from sectarian and political violence while others do not? 4) What accounts for the region's current economic underdevelopment? 5) Why have Islamist parties emerged as prominent opposition forces within some countries? And finally, 6) Why have citizens across the region risen up to try to overthrow dictators and authoritarian regimes?

To explore these questions, the course combines systematic analytical approaches to big questions with concrete knowledge of events and developments in

POLI 238H.001 | Contemporary Latin American Politics

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Evelyne Huber. Enrollment = 24.

This course provides an overview of major topics in the study of Latin American politics. It is aimed at students with a desire to understand how Latin American societies and governments are organized, what the major problems are that these societies are facing, and what accounts for different outcomes from the point of view of the welfare of citizens. We shall examine both common traits in the regions history, culture, and economic, political, and social structures, and important differences between countries in these dimensions. We shall gain an understanding of the diversity of national experiences and a somewhat deeper knowledge of a few select cases: Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Uruguay, and Costa Rica.

Evelyn Huber, Morehead Alumni Distinguished Professor in Political Science, works on problems of development, democratization, and welfare states in Latin America and Europe. Her most recent books, co-authored with John D. Stephens and published by the University of Chicago Press, are entitled Development and

POLI 239H.001 | Introduction to European Government

W, 2:30 pm - 5:00 pm. Instructor(s): Niklaus Steiner. Enrollment = 20.

This course focuses on key political features that are widely and varyingly used in European democracies, such as multi-party systems, parliaments, and proportional representation. It also focuses on key issues that are causing much debate in Europe today, including migration, nationalism, citizenship and populism. An important element of the class is to explore the interaction between these features and issues, how they developed historically especially since 1945, and what might lie ahead for them and for Europe. This class encourages students from a wide range of backgrounds, experiences and perspectives to enroll because it benefits significantly from such diversity. No prior knowledge or experience is needed; instead, students need to be ready to dig deeply into the complicated issues raised in the materials and in our discussions of them.

NOTE: During the 2020-2021 academic year, AMST248 will also fulfill the "Introduction" requirement for the major and minor in American Studies (typically fulfilled by AMST101, AMST102, AMST334 and AMST335).

According to the US Census Bureau, in the year 2020 ,more than half of the nation's children are expected to be part of a minority race or ethnic group. All Americans under the age of 18 are now at the front of a trend that will see the overall population follow suit some 20 years later; (NPR;s Hansi Lo Wang). In essence, we are in a time of a dynamic racial shift, and yet our country seems to be divided or confused about what ;race; is, how to talk about it, and how it might intersect with other identity formations such as gender, class, or sexuality. The first goal of this super-course is to give students real tools for how to address multiple modes of difference and to understand how intersectionality;the theory of interlocking identities that reflect multiple modes of oppression and privilege;is key to the work of social justice.

POLI 490.001 - Advanced Research: Racial Disparities in Criminal Justice

From traffic stops to the death penalty, racial and gender-based disparities abound in US criminal justice outcomes. In this class, we will explore the literature relating to racial disparities in various criminal justice settings and current efforts to address these. Readings will cover such issues as the war on drugs, mass incarceration, racial profiling in traffic stops, and the politics and public opinion of crime, as well as current research projects underway here on campus. The class will involve students working on original research projects addressing a particular issue of racial disparity in criminal justice in North Carolina or elsewhere.

POLI 490.002 - Urban Politics in the United States

This course provides an introduction to the politics of American cities. Topics covered include the economics and history of urban agglomerations, local governments' place in the American federal system, the role of race and immigration in how parties and coalitions govern, whether local governments are responsive to voters, and the role cities play in shaping housing, education, climate, and criminal justice policy.

PSYC 245H.001 | Psychopathology

MWF, 12:20 pm - 1:10 pm. Instructor(s): Charlie Wiss. Enrollment = 24.

: This course will focus on providing an overview of many of the major psychological disorders, with a focus on adult disorders. The major objectives of this course will be for the students to:

- Gain mastery of the diagnostic criteria and identifying features that are associated with each disorder
- Identify and distinguish the disorders
- Have a thorough understanding of the etiologic theories associated with each disorder.
- Understand the major treatment approaches associated with each disorder.

The course will utilize a variety of formats including lectures, discussions, videos, and group presentations. We will attempt to move beyond the definitions of the disorders toward a more nuanced understanding of how they manifest in real life and how modern social, cultural, and biological forces

TITLE: September 11: Origins, Consequences, and Where Do We Go from Here

DESCRIPTION:

This first-year seminar will reflect upon the September 11 terrorist attacks in the United States, exploring how the terrorist attacks occurred and why the U.S. intelligence community and policymakers failed to anticipate and prevent them as well as the subsequent effects on the United States, the Middle East, and the world. The instructor, a former intelligence analyst, will lead students in discussions and in-class exercises to encourage critical analysis of the implications of terrorism, particularly on United States national security. A variety of assignments will require students to assess the causes and results of American national security decisions and alternative decisions that might have been made, supported with research and evidence.

JWST 224H.001 | Modern Jewish Thought

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Andrea Dara Cooper. Enrollment = 5.

The purpose of this course is to explore the role of philosophy in modern Judaism. This course examines how contemporary thinkers have considered philosophy, ethics and theology from a Jewish perspective. Methodological points to be addressed include: the role of interpretation in Judaism, revelation and redemption, authority and tradition, pluralism and inclusion, suffering and evil, twentieth-century approaches to God, and Jewish philosophy in conversation with feminism.

Students in the course will gain a general overview of major topics and thinkers in modern Jewish thought while becoming acquainted with philosophical modes of writing and argumentation. In class, we will read texts critically and closely, analyzing them to outline questions and problems for discussion. Students will gain a sense of the wide variety of discourses within the field of modern Jewish thought and the transnational dimensions of the discipline.

 RELI 073H.001 | From Dragons to Pokemon: Animals in Japanese Myth, Folklore and Religion
 TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Barbara Ambros. Enrollment = 24.

This seminar examines the cultural construction of animals in Japanese myth, folklore, and religion. We will discuss various kinds of animals: those that occur in the natural world, those that are found in myths and folklore, and those that have appeared in popular media such as animation. We will explore how images of various animals were culturally constructed as tricksters, gods, monsters, or anthropomorphic companions; how animals were ritualized as divine, demonic, or sentient beings in Buddhism, Shinto, and folk religion; and how animals could serve as metaphors that embodied collective ideals or anxieties. Most of our readings will focus on primary and secondary texts from the Japanese tradition (in English), but we will also read theoretical texts on human-animal relationships and historical studies on animals in the larger Asian context. We will also view and analyze several Japanese films, both anime and documentaries, that deal with animals and environmental issues.

RELI 220H.001 | Religion & Medicine

TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Jessica Boon. Enrollment = 24.

This course engages with a wide range of religious traditions historically and in the current era to examine crucial issues of health care, medical ethics, disability, and the body. The main objective of the course will be to provide students with a forum to explore the countless cases in the past and present in which medical practices and notions have met/meet religious practices and notions. Studying these topics might help students better understand both religion and medicine, and for some of them, especially those who choose careers in health care and research, it might also enhance their work.

Beginning with a re-evaluation of the medical body in light of Western and Eastern medical definitions over two millennia ago, the course then provides background to the history of medicine in Western Christianity, indigenous healing traditions, and Eastern medical/spiritual practices. We then turn to significant ethical cases in relation to race, gender, and disability, both in historical and contemporary Christianity and in religious traditions around

RELI 224H.001 | Modern Jewish Thought

TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Andrea Dara Cooper. Enrollment = 19.

The purpose of this course is to explore the role of philosophy in modern Judaism. This course examines how contemporary thinkers have considered philosophy, ethics and theology from a Jewish perspective. Methodological points to be addressed include: the role of interpretation in Judaism, revelation and redemption, authority and tradition, pluralism and inclusion, suffering and evil, twentieth-century approaches to God, and Jewish philosophy in conversation with feminism.

Students in the course will gain a general overview of major topics and thinkers in modern Jewish thought while becoming acquainted with philosophical modes of writing and argumentation. In class, we will read texts critically and closely, analyzing them to outline questions and problems for discussion. Students will gain a sense of the wide variety of discourses within the field of modern Jewish thought and the transnational dimensions of the discipline.

ROML 055H.001 Writing with an Accent: Latino Literature and Culture
TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Oswaldo Estrada. Enrollment = 24.
This seminar focuses on the literary production of Latinos living in the U.S. Using a variety of materials (essays, documentaries, films, music) and English-language texts (novels, short stories, plays, poetry) we will examine works by Chicano, Peruvian-American, Nuyorican, Central-American-American, Dominican, and Cuban-American writers. Topics to be discussed include: Latino or Hispanic? What's in a Name?; The politics of Bilingualism; The search for Home in Migrant, Rural, and Urban Environments; The Many Faces of Machismo; Religion and Spirituality in Latino Communities; Forms of Prejudice and Discrimination; Music as a Cultural Bridge. All readings will be in English, though knowledge of Spanish is desirable.

SPAN 261H.001 | Advanced Spanish in Context

MWF, 11:15 am - 12:05 pm. Instructor(s): Helene M de Fays. Enrollment = 11.

Spanish 261H is a fifth semester course that uses a variety of texts (literature, movies, newspaper articles, speeches, and essays) as a basis for reviewing grammatical concepts, developing writing competency, refining analytical skills, and improving overall communication abilities in Spanish. Through work on authentic and original texts, this course continues to focus on refining the students' language skills, as well as further their developing critical analytical capacities. With the readings and films, students will explore their socio-historical context and analyze the application of different linguistic structures as tools employed to create meaning and convey a message. Students will be expected to do a significant amount of reading and writing in Spanish 261H.

Note: This course is the prerequisite for all the Spanish minors and majors at UNC. Students may not receive credit for both SPAN 261 and SPAN 267. This

ELIGIBLE STUDENTS

Seats are limited to incoming fall 2022 transfer students with fewer than 24 transfer credits and incoming fall 2022 first-year students.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES

Some incoming first-year students may be pre-registered into this class section per their pre-registration survey responses. Incoming transfer students with fewer than 24 transfer credits may register for these sections as soon as their registration window begins. The seats leftover after first-year pre-registration and transfer student registration are made available during new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

This course provides essential tools that anybody interested in business should know. We will analyze theory and practice of the major financial decisions made by corporations. The goal of the class is to teach you 1) how to value firms and project opportunities using methods drawn from the theory of corporate finance 2) to develop an appreciation of how financing decisions impact project and firm value and 3) how to develop effective ways to visualize and communicate spreadsheet analyses. By definition, the course is designed to be {hands-on}.

Prerequisite: BUSI 408 with minimum grade of C

Upper-level BUSI courses are not available for FYS.

This is a year-long course that begins in the Fall semester. The emphasis of this course will be on the decisions that must be made by, and/or for, the ultimate investor, and the analytic tools and empirical evidence that can help inform such decisions. The objective of this course is two-fold: first, to provide financial analysts with the analytical skills needed to aid such investors; and second, to help individual investors utilize and evaluate the services offered by analysts. Students will apply the principles and techniques of Investment Management by operating as financial planners (analysts) for the Kenan-Flagler Financial Planners. This course will engage students in managing a real portfolio student managed fund.

ENROLLMENT REQUIRES APPLICATION AND PERMISSION OF KFBS.

Non-SILS students are allowed to register for INLS 151, 201 and 161. However, seats are prioritized according to year (freshman, sophomore, and junior). If you receive a "reserve capacity not met" error message for an open course (green dot), it means that all seats reserved for your year are currently filled. You must add yourself to the waitlist in Connect Carolina, as we will not be keeping an internal waitlist. We will enroll from the waitlist as seats become available. Seniors are not allowed to enroll in these 3 courses.

*Undergraduates can only be on one waitlist at a time and 17 hours is the max during early registration.

We will begin to fill available seats from the waitlist in early August. If you are not waitlisted, you will not be allowed to enroll.

Social Equity in the Public Sector: Self to Systems

Understanding social equity and how individuals and systems work to perpetuate or disrupt inequities is an essential skill for public service leaders. This immersion course will explore how to advance social equity at multiple levels, including the individual, interpersonal, institutional, and structural levels. Topics will include exploring your identity and biases, the role of government in social equity, building and leading equitable organizations, and working together to transform systems.

Course will meet October 6-8 in Chapel Hill, NC.

This course will run 9/7, 9/14, 9/21, 9/28, 10/5, 10/12, and 10/19.

On-campus MPA and online MPA students are welcome in this section at this time. If seats are still available, they will be open to other graduate students closer to the start of the fall term.

ELIGIBLE STUDENTS

Seats are limited to incoming fall 2022 transfer students with fewer than 24 transfer credits and incoming fall 2022 first-year students.

REGISTRATION PROCEDURES

Some incoming first-year students may be pre-registered into this class section per their pre-registration survey responses. Incoming transfer students with fewer than 24 transfer credits may register for these sections as soon as their registration window begins. The seats leftover after first-year pre-registration and transfer student registration are made available during new first-year student registration sessions beginning in July.

BIOS 500H.001 Introduction to Biostatistics
TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Jane Monaco. Enrollment = 24.
This is an introductory course in probability and statistical inference designed for the background and needs of BSPH Biostatistics students.
Topics include survey sampling, descriptive statistics, design of experiments, correlation, probability, confidence intervals, tests of hypotheses, 2-way tables, chi-square distribution, power, ANOVA, non-parametric tests, and linear regression. A small class size will allow opportunity for more in-depth treatment of biostatistics topics.
In addition to traditional introductory statistical concepts, students explore current controversies, ethical questions, and common errors in the medical literature through a variety of readings and a project.
Upon completion, students will have an understanding of many of the most important introductory areas in inferential statistics. Students will be able to produce straight-forward statistical graphs and conduct commonly used analyses using SAS software. Emphasis will be placed on understanding the underlying
